Boeing B-52 D Stratofortress

Die B-52 zählt auch heute noch zu den schwersten und leistungsstärksten Bombern, die jemals gebaut wurden. Im „Kalten Krieg“ und während der internationalen Krisen in den 60er Jahren bildete die B-52 das Rückgrat der amerikanischen Abschreckungspolitik. Die Entwicklung dieses 200t schweren strategischen Bombers begann 1948, in 1955 wurde er beim SAC der USAF in Dienst gestellt. Er wurde hauptsächlich als Atom-bomber, aber auch konventioneller Höhenbomber eingesetzt, aber auch als Plattform für militärische und zivile Versuchsflugkörper. Die achtstrahlige B-52 ist in der Lage, mit 950 Km/h in 12.000 m Höhe ca. 16.000 Km weit zu fliegen, Waffenzuladung 22,6 t. Während des Vietnam-Krieges in den 60er und 70er Jahren wurde die D-Version in Langstrecken-Nachteinsätzen gegen Schlüssel-Industrieanlagen und militärische Ziele eingesetzt. Obwohl es beim SAF der USAF schon zwei Nachfolgetypen gibt, gelangten modernisierte B-52 Bomber im Golfkrieg aber auch im Kosovo-Krieg zum Einsatz.

Boeing B-52 D Stratofortress

Even today the B-52 is still considered one of the heaviest and most powerful bombers ever built. During the „Cold War“ and the international crises of the sixties the B-52 formed the backbone of the American policy of deterrence. The development of this 200 tonne strategic heavy bomber began in 1948. In 1955 it went into service with the USAF SAC. It was mainly used as a nuclear bomber, but also as a conventional high-altitude bomber and as a platform for military and civil test flights. With 8 jet engines the B-52 has the capacity to fly at 950 km/h at an altitude of 12,000 m with a range of about 16,000 km and a weaponload of 22.6 tonnes. During the Vietnam War in the sixties and seventies, the D version was used for long range night missions against key industrial installations and military targets. Although the USAF SAC already has two successors, upgraded B-52 bombers were still in use in the Kosovo War.
